

Statement by Royal Power Solutions on COVID-19 Related Operating Policies

March 26, 2020

Royal Power Solutions, a critical parts manufacturer and supplier of electrification and power components, has updated company operating policies and procedures to fully align with federal and state guidance regarding the COVID-19 pandemic. Illinois Governor Pritzker's "shelter-in-place" executive order stipulates that only businesses classified as essential may remain open at this time.

Royal Power Solutions is part of a critical supply chain for many crucial industries including fire, safety, aerospace, defense, transportation and communication. Therefore, we are working to remain open with our manufacturing, shipping and quality divisions operating from our Carol Stream headquarters for customers that have been designated as essential and have requested our continued support. Employees able to support Royal remotely - including sales, customer service and engineering – are doing so under the company's telework program to further support the federal and state guidance during the crisis.

Royal is closely monitoring all orders and policies affecting commerce and the overall supply chain on a daily basis and continue to put the health and safety of our employees, suppliers and customers as our highest priority.

Royal continues to operate within the guidelines of the current orders and required policies to support the supply of essential products and services that our customers have deemed essential. We continue to work with customers to understand their operating plans and their own assessment of their essential designation based on their local operating guidelines. Our efforts are to ensure Royal maintains their critical role in the supply chain to provision products and service deemed "essential" in the fight against COVID-19.

Thank you in advance for your support.
